

Practical Advice and a Disclaimer for Candidates

We understand that financing further assessment tests or medical evaluations can be very difficult for many potential testers. In recognition of these hardships faced by many individuals, we have compiled a list of university clinics that may offer the type of testing or evaluation you are seeking at a discounted rate. It is important to note, however, that the wait time can vary significantly for prospective patients, depending upon the time of year and the services needed. The costs and fees, as outlined on the list, may also have been modified or changed altogether for the services requested. The clinics listed also have varying policies on the types of insurance accepted, if any, for services administered.

Please view this list as a general resource and starting point if you need to obtain more testing or documentation for the purpose of requesting accommodations. As always, we encourage potential testers to plan well in advance to complete their testing and obtain the necessary documentation.

In addition to the listing of clinics provided, individuals may contact their state's Department of Vocational Rehabilitation if you have previous disability documentation that has since expired. Depending upon your place of residence, there may also be nonprofit service providers or community health clinics that may provide free or reduced price services.

Finally, please note that GED Testing Service does not endorse or support any of these programs, nor do we give preferential treatment to candidates who obtain documentation from one of these programs.
